VALUABLE DIAMONDS.

Donler Clots About the Rivest Gen-Ever Seen in This Country. The most valuable diamond, for its size, that has ever been in this country is now here in the hands of a dealer on Maiden lane, not for sale, but that he may, it possible, find a mate to be a jub that he is about giving up in despair. I have hought diamonds from him, and can obtain for you the prive-llege of seeing this magnificent stone, if you care to have a look at a gen that is worth remembering all your life. When I tell you that it weighs but three and five-eighths curats, less a thirty-second; that the owner has refused ever $7,000 for it, and that be will cheerfully give $10000, or, per-haps, more, for a match to it, you will have become cheap. Europe and America have been ransacked to find its mate, but thus far in vain. A bine stone of its purity of thit, perfection of make and size is not known to exist, either in private collections of gens, in the hands of dealers, or even among royal treasures. Not a great while since the newspapers made mention of a pair of diamonds, then in Now York, that weighed together fifteen carats and were held at $50,000. That seemed like a pretty good price for stones that are getting common and cheap, but it is far less in proportion, than the worth of this blue stone. At its determined value, upon the hasis of its present size, if it were as large as one of that matched pair it would be worth about $32,000, and, as the value of a marched pair of fine diamonds is far more than double that inf one of the pair stand. fine diamonds is far more than double that if one of the pair singly, two such blue stones weighing together fifteen carats would cost almost 'a King's ran-

GERMAN POTATOES.

Millions of Bushels Imported Annually by American Dealers, The exporting of German potatoes to the United States is a comparatively new business, a rather small matter now, but growing, and likely to us-sume large proportions. The United States, it would seem, can not ruiso enough potatoes to supply the home demand. In 1885-6 we imported 1,-937-896 bushets of potatoes, and exearled, of our best varieties, 191918 bushels, our net huports amounting then, to 1,442 448 bushels; lu 1886-7 we imported 1 t32 490 bushels and exported 43 t 86 t looshels, leaving our real deficit at 997,626 bushels. The last crop was said to be about 30,000. much more largely than we imported In either of the two previous years. The duty on imported potatoes is 15 cents per faished, hence it would soom that with duty and other expenses added, somehady should be making a very good thing from the sale of German polatoes in America. The German facio ers "deny the soft lurpeachment, while admitting that they get a fair price for their potatoes. It must be that the importers and dealers in Now York make the money. So long as German potatoes bring $1 a bushel in New York, surely the American farmer can not complain of rainens compe-tition. The business of exporting German potatoes to America Is, howover its infancy yel. The first shipment was made last September, when 8,000 bushols wore seat from Stettln; the results wore so satisfactory that a regular business was established, and ship-

Retaining Moisture in Soil-

As the country grows older droughts become mure injurious, because the effect of enlitivation is generally diminish the natural capacity of the soll to hold moisture. As the vege-table matter lucreases the surface becomes hardened, and water from rains and snows runs off instead of slukling luto the soil. For this reason many sund streams fail, as the water runs away early on the surface, instead of slowly filtering into the reservoirs that formerly supplied them. This is especially true on heavy hand, whose capacity for retaining moisture deponds heen living with das. W. Garrott her sour-in-law, has moved back to her old home near here to live the balsoils dryer in times of drought. On the contrary, it does exactly the re-verse. The drain, by temoving surbecome more porous. The value of an underdrala thus increases with the deeper freezing of each successive winter, because this increases the capacity of the soil to retain water. This is one reason why drains should be made at least three feet deep in our Northern climate, so as to get thom down below reach of injurious freez-Generally, however, when the soil freezes so deeply there is no water in the tiles, and if they or the soil around them be freezen it does the drain no damage -St Taul Pioneer

Seurfy-Legged Chickens.

Senriy or scabby legs in fewls is a diseaso somowhat similar in character to manago in dogs and scab in sheep. It is due to the presence of a small mite oaly about one eight-hundredth of an luck in longth. These mites live and broad in the spongy growth under the scales or scales. The first tiling to be done is to place the fewis in a dry room, where their feet and legs will be protected from mind and water. Then take equal parts of kerosene and lard, and stir he enough flowers of sulping to make a thick olntmeat. With a small and soft paint; brush apply the olntment to the legs and feet of the afflicted fowls, and repeat the application dally nath the scabs disappear. A half dozou applications will usually be sufficient to effect a cure. Caged birds are often afflicted with this same disease, especially when kept ta large numbers and their eages are not regularly and thoroughly cleaned .- N. Y.

The display of the State Department Centennial Exposition is truly wonder-ful. The walls of the department are adorned with numerous relles and curi-ositles, while the cases are filled with rare documents of historical interest. Among the latter class is the first diple mutle communication of the United States, which was written to the flovernor of France by Benjamin Franklin, and dated 'Paris, December 23, 1776,' and signed by H. Franklin, Silas Deane and Anthur Lee. In the first show case on the west wall can be seen the original The signature of George III is shown, and the treaty was done at Paris, November 30, 1792. in the same show case is the trenty of alliance with France, signed by King Louis, February 6, 1778. A GTOD PLACE To View on Interesting Scene at the Clu cincatt Cautenulal.

One of the best places to witness an in-teresting scene in the famous Music Hall of Chrimath during the Exposition is the foyer in the second story of that historic pile, upon some floral day. Peep-locking beneath you for thirty feet, can be seen a large expanse of territory in the elegant lobby, devoted exclusively to ent-flower display. These beautiful floral designs are arranged on long benches, or platforms, between which masses of hi manity pass overy few minutes to feast their ages upon them. The crowd is composed of all sorts and conditions of peoplo-a atuly in Itself-and those who can view the pageant quietly from their perch above are interested to such an estent that they leave their position with reductance, to either outer the gallery where Rhodopis can be seen, or to listen to the awest strains produced by the Cinchinali Orchestra stationed in the centur of the magnificent auditorium.
